Abstract

In 2018 a hot new Ruby meetup appeared online. 🔥 Three meetups later, it was gone. 😭

This failed experiment paved the way for a new Ruby podcast: REDACTED. 170 episodes later, we've learned a lot! We had no previous experience podcasting before the first episode. Along the way we've learned things like what kind of gear to use, how to perform interviews, and affirmed just how lovely the Ruby community is.

It's your turn! Come to learn from our mistakes, leave ready to start a podcast!

Bet.

Get guests

What guest preparation looks like

- Be comfortable asking people to join
  - Keep it concise, flattering, and simple to setup
- Before recording…
  - Prepare any questions you'd like to ask
  - Ask the guest if there's anything they'd like to talk about
- Make the guest the star of the episode
- Give them a platform to share where people can find them

Get guests

What unwanted guests look like

- Know your audience
  - If it’s not a good fit, politely pass (or ignore)
- If you’re unsure…
  - Do some research- have they been on other podcasts?
  - Do an introductory call- ask them to chat with you and feel it out
